

ESI Strengthens its Regulatory Practice

Energy Strategies is pleased to announce the addition of Oliwia Smith as a Consultant whose primary role will be to support the firm's Regulatory Practice Area. As our clients face an increasingly complex energy and regulatory environment, Energy Strategies is expanding our efforts to provide additional expert regulatory and economic advice and support in the area of utility regulation. Oliwia's primary role will be to assist the firm in all of its utility regulatory activities including utility rate activities, IRP filings, competitive procurement processes, forecasting and other client energy and regulatory needs.

Prior to joining Energy Strategies, Oliwia worked for the Utah Committee of Consumer Services as a utility analyst and was responsible for evaluating and providing recommendations on a wide array of issues pertaining to utility rate regulation. She had significant experience in telecom deregulation prior to joining Energy Strategies. Before her employment with the State of Utah, Oliwia earned a Bachelor's Degree in Economics from Westminster College and is currently a candidate for Master's Degree in Economics at the University of Utah.
